emperor Akbar (1542–1616) and the Maharana of Mewar, Maharana Pratap (1489–1526), founder of the Marwar state, have a close personal relationship but have a deep-seated mistrust of each other and face off against each other in a battle that will determine the fate of India. Both men want to unite all of India under their power. Release. Jodhaa Akbar is a 2008 historical drama film, adapted from the Sharaf-e-Dil, a verse written by the 14th-century Mughal emperor, Akbar, on the eve of his conquest of the Rajputana area. The film is directed by Ashutosh Gowariker and was released in 2008. The story of Jodhaa Akbar is set in the Mughal Empire in the 16th century and tells the story of Jodha Akbar, the daughter of Mughal emperor Akbar, and her husband Rao Gopal, a commander in the Emperor's army. The movie is rated PG for occasional use of suggestive comments, mild innuendo and some sequences of violence.
