The Slender Man is an ambiguous horror monster that has been the inspiration of various artistic and creative projects. The Slender Man is most famously known from the Something Awful forum known as The Shoggoths. This is a conspiracy theory about a fictitious committee. The Slender Man was rumored to have been created by an anonymous individual or group of individuals from the US Naval Research Laboratory (NRL) within the secret Section III (Biological Division). The Slender Man's origins are unknown. As of 2016, there are no known publications that confirm the origins of the Slender Man. The Slender Man is not listed in the FAQ section of the Noob Tube website as a hoax. This monster has inspired many people, including Stephen King, who wrote a novel about him and named him after him. The novel is called The Eyes of the Dragon and was released in 1983. The monster has also inspired artwork, including the webcomic Silent Hill: Shattered Memories. In this comic, the Slender Man is referred to as "M," and the author claims that the only things the Slender Man can be killed are "unbelievers." The name Slender Man is said to be derived from "slender man" (a shortened version of "Slender man"), a name invented by Jerry Davis, from a cloying lyric in the heavy metal song "The Ghost in You". The poem "Let the Right One Slip in" by Colin Nicholson appeared in issue 38 of his title, Under the Moon. The Slender Man has appeared in comic books, movies and video games. The long-term objective of the research proposed here is to gain a better understanding of the characteristics of neuronal inhibition and excitation in the mammalian visual system. The experiments described in this application will investigate the role of inhibitory synapses and their transmission in controlling the temporal properties of the visual response. A major part of the experiments proposed here is to determine whether the function of inhibitory synapses may be described by a simple, fast, highly linear time-invariant linear differential equation model. If this is found to be the case, the proposed experiments will then determine whether the dynamics of inhibition in the visual system, as described by this model, are invariant across the visual field, under the action of adaptation, and under different levels of illumination. In a second series of experiments,
