I copy the code and paste it to notepad and open it with notepad. I get value that is . M 41.wmv 286mb Hit. that has to be some kind of encoding but im not sure what it is. What i want to know is how to get that data in variable so i can pass it to my php file. Can someone help me with it. P.S. The main reason for this is that i need it as variables in PHP file A: In notepad use Ctrl+H to show all hidden characters. There are 3 characters, the first one is a weird one with a man, the second one is "." and the third one is "|". The weird one, google it. it is a weird character that is probably invisible on your screen. I don't know why you put it there and I do not know what it is. Either change the encoding from ANSI to UTF8, or use the Notepad++ application. If you need a variable for PHP, you need to use the encoding that the variables in PHP are saved in. That is UTF8. See your notepad++ settings: notepad++->Preferences->New Document->Text Encoding->Input. You should set it to UTF-8. If you have it already set, you might have to click on Reload. Not sure about the order of these settings, maybe you have to click them in order. EDIT Check this out:

var_dump(file_get_contents('temp.txt'));

Supergenome The supergenome (SG) is a proposed general purpose, complete genome-based sequencing project in the Human Genome Project. Gene coverage The SG encompasses all functional genes on the human genome. This approach differs from that of the base-pair approach, in which project participants aim to sequence all non-repeated DNA in the genome (the "B-genome"). The SG also differs from the project's existing technical approaches, which generate sequence reads from overlapping segments of the genome. Structure The SG has 2 sub-projects: (1) SG for the National Library of Medicine (NLM) Sequencing Center (SGC), which is co-

sponsored by the National Human Genome Research Institute (NHGRI), the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious
