The problem is that the output of 3> command is not the whole terminal but the last line of the output. for example: $ echo "$(tput sc)" $ echo 3> output.txt $ cat output.txt $ cat output.txt ^[[31;2B can someone help me figure out the solution? Thanks! A: To get what you want, you need to execute echo 3>&- which will redirect the output to nowhere, instead of a file. A: Use the redirection operator >& instead. It redirects both standard and pseudo-file output. Q: How to make an element in HTML 5 and scroll to the bottom of the page using javascript? In my application I have a div which has been placed at the bottom of the page. I want that whenever a user scrolls down to the bottom of the page, the div comes to the top and covers the page. A: This is very easy to do. function scrollDown() { window.scrollTo(0, document.body.scrollHeight); } A: You can set it up like so: HTML: Javascript: window.onload = function () { window.scroll
