REBASE You can split and rejoin large mp3 files into multiple small files that may be easily organized into a playlist. You will need to specify the filename extension (.mp3,.ogg,.wav) of the output files. This tool has the potential to become a very powerful playlist splitter, with the added feature of streaming media to external players (and DLNA as well). MAKECOPY The MAKECOPY tool copies the data from one mp3 to another, preserving the time signatures in the process, and switches the file's extension to the.mp3,.ogg or.wav. This feature is very powerful when used for creating playlists, as it preserves the original file names. If the source file has an mp3 extension, the output file will be a new mp3 file (with.mp3 extension). If the source file has an ogg extension, the output file will be a new ogg file (with.ogg extension). And if the source file has a wav extension, the output file will be a new wav file (with.wav extension). What's New in the RadioDJ?

RadioDJ is a free audio and multimedia utility for Windows which allows you to edit and manage radio playlists. What's new in this version: • After a change in the database schema and a large number of bug fixes, the database doesn't crash anymore after creating a radio station with a large number of songs. The tool for creating radio stations is still unstable, but less crashes and more warnings are now presented. • The main window was considerably improved, and the program now fits in the full-screen mode with default settings. • RadioDJ now automatically detects the audio output device and automatically switches between two layouts, if needed. • RadioDJ now also lets you manage more event types. ...as time goes by, new services come and go. They change, they are eliminated, and many are just plain terrible. This, for example, would be "A new service, World's Largest "Jambalaya" Take-Out Order, With $10 from every sale going to Doctors Without Borders," which I'd like to eat, and maybe consider ordering, if I had the time, or if it's not the end of the world to wait a few minutes to know whether or not my $10 goes to good use. I'm looking for new Services, and want to share them. It's fun. How do I submit a service? Write it here and email it to me. "Lagooning" is a Service, for example. Examining the Topic Directory You'll notice at first glance that the Topics have the tags "hard," "ip," "log," "love," "mp3," "mac," "screen savers," "sns," and "security." You might notice that these tags are broad terms. I'd say that "hard" isn't too broad, but maybe tags like "excessive_screen_color" or "virus_scanner" would be better. You can also write your own tag, by putting an "@" in front of it. See the example below. Tag Description: @future_service Write a description for the tag that will be shown to the public. The description will appear under the tag in the Topics tab of the main window. I'd also say that the "social
